LANA DEL REY

Lana and Monaco already share a long history. In 2012, when her first album Born To Die had just come out, when many still thought that she was just an Internet phenomenon, a manufactured starlette, gauche and without a future, the Artistic Department of the Société des Bains de Mer was the first to offer her the stage at the Opéra Garnier for a small yet memorable concert. The beautiful American has returned to the principality many times, shooting her first major video here, between the Hôtel de Paris and Monte Carlo Beach, and performing her second album, Ultraviolence, on the stage of the Monte-Carlo Sporting Summer Festival. Yet another memorable performance! The honeymoon between Lana Del Rey and Monaco continues as she returns this summer to sing songs from her latest album, Honeymoon, even more mournful and ethereal than its predecessors.

The lead single, 'High By the Beach' could have been written during her first stay in the Côte d'Azur. In the video, she chases the paparazzi with a heavy weapon! The new, California-sun-filled single, 'Freak', captures the hippy era with an 11-minute video that finishes with an aquatic ballet to Debussy's 'Clair de Lune'. A great opening to her summer concerts, between 'Summertime Sadness', 'Born to Die', and 'Video Games'. Just enough time to put a pair of 'Blue Jean'(s) on a 'Body Electric' and drink a 'Paradise'-style 'Cola' and she will be here: near, yet inaccessible all at once. The most mysterious and moving of today's divas.
